Involvement: People of the State of California v. Blaire C. Hall. Defendant. Husband and wife were relaxing and drinking coffee in their backyard spa early in the morning. They also had their soap and towels and were using the spa for bathing because their bathroom was being remodeled. Mrs. Hall left the spa to go inside the house to wake up their daughter for work, and get more coffee. Mrs. Hall came back outside carrying a cup of coffee and passed her husband as he entered the house. A short time later, Mr. Hall went out to check on his wife and found her face down in the spa, unconscious, with large gashes on the top and back of her head. Mr. Hall yelled for his daughter to call 911 and to help him, because he was having difficulty removing his wife from the spa. Resuscitation attempts were unsuccessful and Mrs. Hall died as a result of drowning. It is believed that Mrs. Hall slipped and fell while entering the spa. There were no handrails, the steps were slippery, water was cloudy and foamy, Mrs. Hall was holding a cup of coffee while she entered the spa and the coffee cup was found at the bottom of the spa. The lacerations on her head were consistent with having fallen on a sharp edge of coping that protruded into the spa. A neighbor peaking through her fence misinterpreted what she saw, began embellishing what she had observed every time she repeated the story, and convinced the police that she saw Mr. Hall struggle with his wife in the spa, and hold his wife's head under water until she drowned. Police charged Mr. Hall with murdering his wife.

 Year: 2006
 Involvement: Hertzfeld v. Hayward Pool Products. Defendant. Service company installed an inline erosion feeder on a residential pool, but plaintiff claims that she was not given a copy of the O & M manual. At the end of the season, she dismantled the feeder and stored it in her garage, without first rinsing the feeder. Someone told the plaintiff that the fumes from the chlorinator could damage her car, so she attached both ends of the chlorine feed lines together. Pressure built up in the vessel over the Winter. In the Spring when the plaintiff wanted to reinstall the feeder, she could not get it open. Plaintiff whacked the feeder with a hammer and it cracked. The feeder lid blew off hitting and injuring her hand and her boyfriend's face.
